

Notification of Inaction by Bush Administration and Subordinate Cabinets Regarding Known Terrorists Operating within the U.S.

There is sufficient hard and circumstantial evidence to definitively prove the FBI was aware of certain terrorists operating within the United States prior to 9/11. Not only did the FBI take no steps to arrest and detain known operatives, for unknown reasons many of these pre 9/11 terrorist organizations are still operating openly in the United States. Several FBI whistle blowers with first hand knowledge of these facts due to their jobs, have been gagged by the government from speaking out and providing facts regarding prior knowledge of terrorist cells operating pre 9/11. One such specific incident is cited here:

According to Dr. Daniele Ganser, who specializes in secret warfare and is a Senior Researcher at the Center for Security Studies:

"For the past four years, we have been told by the administration of George Bush and by the official 9/11 Commission report of Chairman Thomas Kean and Executive Director Philip Zelikow that Egyptian extremist Mohammed Atta was the key player in the 11 September 2001 terrorist attacks. Atta, according to the Kean report, was the "tactical leader of the 9/11 plot". He was the pilot who on that dreadful morning flew the first plane, American Airlines 11, into the North Tower of the World Trade Center in New York....

"Now, almost exactly four years after 9/11, the facts appear to have been turned upside down. We now learn that Atta was also connected to a top secret operation of the Pentagon's Special Operations Command (SOCOM) in the US. According to Army reserve Lieutenant-Colonel Anthony Shaffer, a top secret Pentagon project code-named Able Danger had identified Atta and three other 9/11 hijackers as members of an al-Qaida cell more than a year before the attacks....

"Able Danger was an 18-month highly classified operation tasked, according to Shaffer, with "developing targeting information for al-Qaida on a global scale", and used data-mining techniques to look for "patterns, associations, and linkages". He said he himself had first encountered the names of the four hijackers in mid-2000. Schaffer himself was fully aware of the delicacy of his revelations. As such, he chose to first speak to US lawmaker and Speaker of the House Dennis Hastert (Republican, Illinois) and House Intelligence Committee Chairman Peter Hoekstra (Republican, Michigan). Schaffer said the two had assured him that exposing the secret "was the right thing to do". "I was given assurances we would not suffer any adverse consequences for bringing this to the attention of the public," he said. The conversations with Hastert and Hoekstra took place before Schaffer anonymously leaked the information to the media on 8 August in the offices of Republican Curt Weldon of Pennsylvania, the vice chairman of the House Armed Services and Homeland Security committees who also supported the exposure of this secret. Schaffer's decision to expose Operation Able Danger has given rise to some difficult questions, not the least of which concerns the role of Atta in the top secret operation. It also raises the question of whether anyone in the Pentagon knew in advance what Atta was planning on 9/11....

"According to Schaffer, when he informed the FBI and urged them to arrest Atta, the Pentagon's lawyers intervened and protected Atta for reasons that remain unclear. The official 9/11 Commission report, which according to its own declaration aimed "to provide the fullest possible account of the events surrounding 9/11" in its 567-page report, fails to mention Operation Able Danger or any other US-based SOCOM operations. On the contrary, in its recommendations as to how the US could be better protected from "terrorists" in the future, the Kean report on page 415 suggests that SOCOM be given larger powers to carry out covert action operations, previously a domain controlled by the CIA. Schaffer, according to his own testimony, had personally informed Zelikow about Able Danger. Yet Zelikow covered up this piece of the puzzle and, to Schaffer's frustration and disbelief, decided not to include this data on the pretext that it was "not historically relevant."

Despite the massive amount of documentation to substantiate the evidence, not a single individual in any capacity has been reprimanded, demoted or held accountable for the failures of 911. Instead, many higher level public officials have been promoted.

You are highly encouraged to read these two in depth recitals of specific terrorists organizations by investigative journalist, Patrick Briley:

The above in-depth and thoroughly researched essays represent just the tip of the iceberg of 100% provable players being ignored or protected by the FBI and CIA. American journalists are doing the work of uncovering extreme dangers to the American people and now we are making this information known to members of Congress, governors, state legislators and local law enforcement throughout this country.

There's too much detailed, documented information to ignore and take no action. Each of you took an oath to protect, preserve and uphold the Constitution of the United States of America from all enemies foreign and domestic. We know the enemies of America are here on American soil and the invasion from Mexico is hemorrhaging untold numbers of terrorists across the border in the dead of night. We urge you to review the attached material and make your collective voices heard by Congress and demand steps are taken to stop protecting known terrorists in this country before another 911 ravages our country.

It is a disgrace that so much verifiable documentation and facts are available, yet the FBI, under the flawed stewardships of Robert Mueller and the U.S. Department of Justice headed up by Alberto Gonzales, continue to ignore these very real dangers. One has to wonder, why? Therefore, it is up to we the people to communicate with as many public officials as possible letting you know that if another terrorist incident occurs, we will hold all of those personally responsible for these agencies, state or federal, responsible for any attacks through constitutional remedies.
